Great Neck Water Pollution Control District Welcomes Local Officials and Organizations to Facility

The Great Neck Water Pollution Control District (GNWPCD) recently welcomed Nassau County Legislator Ellen Birnbaum, Town Councilwoman Lee Seeman and representatives from Reach Out America, the Great Neck Breast Cancer Coalition and North Shore Action for an informational presentation and tour of GNWPCD's wastewater treatment facility. GNWPCD's Commissioner Steve Reiter and Commissioner Patty Katz began the afternoon describing multiple eco-friendly projects that have been conducted in recent years—and the upcoming projects slated to begin in the fall at 236 E. Shore Road.

Following the presentation, attendees were treated to a tour of the GNWPCD's facility providing an opportunity to observe the environmentally-conscious technologies and processes discussed during the presentation. The commissioners also answered numerous questions regarding the proactive measures their organization has taken to invest in cost-effective infrastructure projects.
